

Mid-Year Graduation Set For Jan. 31

Vincent Giese
To Speak at Commencement

STUFF

Mass, Dinner
Scheduled for 28 Candidates

Vincent J. Giese, '45, has been invited by the St. Joseph's Academic Senate and President's Council to deliver the commencement address for the graduating seniors on Sunday, January 31.

Mr. Giese will also be granted the Alumni Merit Award by the administration and faculty of the college. This newly created award will be conferred periodically to St. Joseph's alumni as a standard recognition for work they have done in their field. It is one of three awards, including the Honorary Degree and the Award of Merit to outstanding non-graduates of St. Joseph's, which the school may now confer on deserving persons.

Mr. Giese has received masters degrees in journalism and political science from Marquette University and the University of Notre Dame, respectively. Since 1949 he has been serving as editorial director of Fides Publishers Association, a non-profit Catholic publishing house in Chicago. Mr. Giese is also executive editor of Perspectives, a bi-monthly relating religion to our times. He has authored three books, entitled Apostolic Itch, Patterns for Teenagers, and Training for Leadership. He has also served as co-author of On the Way to God, a textbook of religion for the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, along with Sister Jane Marie Murray, O. P.

Besides writing free-lance for many Catholic publications, Mr. Giese has served as a lecturer on the lay apostolate and a teacher of religion for public high school boys. He is a member of the National Lay Committee of the CCD and of the Board of Directors of Adult Education Centers, Chicago. In the last three years, Mr. Giese represented the CCD at the Second World Congress of the Lay Apostolate in Rome and was a delegate for the Young Christian Workers at the World Youth Festival in Vienna.

Business Majors Added; Psychology Dept. Created

Two major changes in the courses offered by St. Joseph's College were made by the faculty at a meeting held on Dec. 9. The two actions taken which would affect the students were the revamping of the general business and marketing majors and the creation of a new department of psychology.

To replace the majors in general business and marketing, the faculty has created majors in three courses, finance, management and marketing. A new program of study has also been set up for these three majors and will include the following courses: principles of marketing, principles of management, business law, industrial management, personnel management, budgeting, sales management, institutional management, corporation finance, government and business, business statistics, financial statement analysis, managerial decision-making, seminar in business policy, investments, retailing organization and operation, problems

New Council Committee Formed To Judge On Discipline, Prefects

by Jerry Mauch

During the past week a complete revamping of the disciplinary powers of the St. Joseph's Student Council has taken place with the establishment of a Disciplinary committee and its immediate assumption of newly created obligations and powers.

Under its new formulation, the Student Council committee is to concern itself with two main duties: the appointment, approval and backing of student prefects and the responsibility over certain areas of correction in order to preserve various benefits of the student body.

Included in the powers of its first duty, the Disciplinary committee will choose all student prefects, as well as handle all forms of discipline which these prefects might wish to impose.

Powers granted to the committee in matters of discipline are as follows:

- (a) the committee has the right to recommend disciplinary changes in the Student Handbook,
- (b) the committee has the power to campus a student, or students, for whatever period it deems necessary to maintain order and discipline,
- (c) the committee may request that a student be placed on disciplinary probation or suspended from school.

In appealing or requesting matters of discipline, the newly organized committee will deal mainly with the Dean of Men and the college Board of Discipline. The college disciplinary machinery still reserves the right, though, to take whatever action it desires in matters of student drinking, immorality and theft. The student committee will have the right of appeal and request in such cases.

Members of this committee each year will be the Student Council president and three members from both the senior and junior classes to be chosen by the Council. Junior committee members will serve as the senior members for the following year. Already chosen to serve for the balance of this year along with Student Council president Maurice O'Connor are Roger Mueller, Ed Massura, Henry Murphy, Dave Beran, Bob Decker and Joe Zolecki.

In the past, the functions of the Council in regard to discipline were limited to an appeal on behalf of the student to the college Board of Discipline. These functions are now undergoing a complete change in definition and powers as stated in the SC constitution.

Dig This Beat Bit About Mardi Gras

"Like beat, man, that's what the Mardi Gras will be!"

Yes, the Mardi Gras for 1960 will be built around a theme of the beat generation. To be held on Saturday evening, Feb. 20, the pre-Lenten dance will be open to students of all four class levels, with admission being limited by number because of the space available in Raleigh hall.

Sponsored by the Student Council Dance committee, the annual affair will cost the St. Joseph's student $3.00, which will include admission to the dance and the weekend meals for his date. Tickets will go on sale after the semester vacation in the college cafeteria.

Originally scheduled for the weekend of Feb. 27, the date of the dance was moved up one week because of a conflicting home basketball game with Marian college.

Larry Kelly and Mike Mettler, Dance committee co-chairmen, will late in Rome and was a delegate for the Young Christian Workers at the World Youth Festival in Vienna.

be in charge of the arrangements and decorations for the Mardi Gras. At the request of the Student Council, all couples planning to attend the dance must wear a costume of some kind, with emphasis placed on the "beatnik" theme.

In recent years, costumes were not mandatory for the event, but this year the Student Council felt that "the dance would be more enjoyable for all if everyone was obliged to wear costumes."

Dance music will be provided by a professional-combo of approximately six members, with negotiations still being made for the contract by the Dance committee.

Since no dances may be held during the Lenten season, this event will be the only social affair for approximately seven weeks on the St. Joseph's campus.

Dorm Rates To Be Raised

Slight changes have been made in student expense charges beginning with the fall semester of 1960. Tuition and board expenses will remain the same as the school year 1959-60, with changes only being made in room costs for the dormitory houses surrounding the campus.

Instead of the separate rates ranging from $70 to $85 per semester, all these houses will cost the same rate, $90. Residence halls will remain at the same rate of $110 per semester. As a result, the only students affected by these changes will be those living in Washburn, Scharf and the White house.

Members of the same family attending the college will be granted a new decrease in tuition cost to help eliminate the burden on one family. The second brother who enters St. Joseph's while the other is registered will be granted a 25% decrease in tuition fees, the third, a 50% decrease and any others will have to pay no tuition at all. These decreases will be in affect only while the brothers are attending the school simultaneously.

Commencement ceremonies for 28 St. Joseph's students will take place Sunday, Jan. 31 on the college campus. Scheduled to deliver the parting address to the graduating seniors is Vincent J. Giese, 1945 graduate of St. Joseph's.

Graduation activities began last night with a cocktail party in the faculty room and a faculty-graduates dinner following. On Jan. 31, an academic procession from the Administration building to the chapel will initiate the ceremonies for the day, beginning at 10:15 a.m.

High Mass in honor of the graduates will begin at 10:30 a.m. followed by the graduates' individual reception of their guests in the faculty room and classrooms of the Administration building.

Dinner for the graduates and their guests will start at 12:00 noon, after which the degrees will be conferred and the commencement address will be delivered.

Candidates for the degree of B.S. in accounting are: Roy L. Bailey, Griffith, Ind. and James C. Caswell, Ionia, Mich.

B.S. in biology: Leroy S. Dyrek, Chicago, Ill. and George W. Lingen, Jr., Evergreen Park, Ill.

B.A. in economics: Thomas M. Cavanaugh, Lansing, Mich.; Mark J. Doorley, New Bremen, Ohio; Joseph P. Kovitch, Berwyn, Ill.; and Joseph M. Watson, Philadelphia, Pa.

Larry Kelly Named "Man of Month"

Larry Kelly, a junior from Marion, O., is the Stuff Man of the Month for January. As chairman of the Dance committee, he has been responsible for staging the mixers which have been bigger this semester than ever before.

Larry's duties consist in contacting the various girls' schools around St. Joe, such as St. Mary-of-the-Woods and inviting them to the dances. He has to make arrangements for the girls' rooms and their meals over the week-end, as well as obtain tickets for them to whatever sports event is taking place on the campus.

Larry also has to see to it that the Rec Hall is cleaned up before and after every dance.

So far this semester, he has squeezed three mixers in between the Tower Dance, the Date Dance, and Homecoming. One of the mixers was the largest in history. Thanks to Larry's efforts, 340 girls invaded the St. Joe campus that week-end.

Larry has served on the Student Council for the last three years. He was president of his freshman and sophomore classes, and this year Council president Reece O'Connor appointed him chairman of the Dance committee, a non-voting seat on the Council.

As a sophomore, he was a member of the Northern Ohio club and he has also participated in intramural football and basketball.

Larry is majoring in business. He attended St. Mary's high school in Marion where he was president of his senior class.

New SC Disciplinary Committee: A Step toward Greater Self-Rule

In the past week a very significant change has taken place in the powers that are to be vested in the students themselves. The creation of the new Disciplinary committee of the Student Council gives the Council the power to keep a close check on student discipline, thus eliminating the limitation of such power to the administration level.

This year, the first year of its existence, then, must be one in which the committee proves its capabilities and worth. If after a sufficient trial period the committee is seen to be failing, its chances for reorganization are slim.

Immediately this committee must begin to use its powers in the fairest way possible so that the student body will respect its actions.

Two powers which have been vested in the committee are very important and show a vote of confidence on the part of the administration. These powers are the choosing and handling of student prefects and the right to campus or suspend students for matters of discipline which it feels are sufficiently detrimental to the student body.

These two powers are the backbone of the whole committee. In themselves, they give the student body the right to govern itself in something other than social activities. This is definitely a step in the right direction to bring the Student Council to a level of authority in all forms of student life.

Even more important to the success of this committee is the choice of members. As it is presently set up, the three members from the junior and the senior classes are chosen by the Council. This puts a very great responsibility in the Council's hands. Committee members must be students who are respected by their fellow students and whose opinions will be recognized as authoritative.

Each member must be willing to use his best judgment in disciplinary matters which come before the committee. One definite asset in the selection of members is the structure whereby junior members of one year will become senior members of the next year. In this manner, at least one half of the committee will have already served for a year and will know the proper procedure to follow in a course of action.

Success this year, then, rests mainly in the hands of the senior members who at this time have no past experience on such a disciplinary board. Their power to take full charge of prefects and to recommend suspensions are powers which can make or break any confidence placed in the students.

We look upon this committee as one of tremendous value, but only if its duties are carried out in the proper manner.

Reviewer Reviews His Reviewers

Dear Editors,

I would like to answer the so-called objections to my review of Time Limit.

First, Emil Gies, I do believe that the play's authors sought to make "the tale of intrigue in the lines of POWs the object of their efforts." Had they wanted to merely portray the after-effects of such a life, they could have done so more easily than they had in Time Limit. Rather, I feel their primary aim was to re-create with delicate precision the relationship of POWs in a war camp. It is in such a camp that the minds of even the strongest are bent under tremendous strain and men do acts for which they cannot be held accountable. So Emil, these are hardly the after-effects of life; these constitute life itself.

Concerning Rita Layden's role, perhaps she was "probably the only person who read for that part" since our number of actresses is limited. But I recall a CP production of two years ago entitled "Charley's Aunt" in which there were four feminine roles and all portrayed extremely well. I wonder why the number of actresses wasn't limited then, hmm?

I'm happy to see that you did think one part of the production was inadequate—the costuming. And I do agree with you that the actor's interpretation of the play is paramount. That was exactly the point in my review. The interpretation, although paramount, was poor. You said that good acting covers up for poor costuming, lighting, and props. Yet the question remains: What covers up for poor acting?

Tom Carpenter, you are next. If the opinion of a history major isn't worth commenting on, I don't see why you bothered. However, since you did comment on my review, I know that you at least read it. As a sociology major, you should learn to respect the opinions of others, for respect does not mean agreement. How can you expect to work with people for whom you have little or no respect? I certainly do not agree with your letter to the editor, but at least I found it worth commenting on.

You say that the hard work put in by the cast was appreciated. Of course, I also appreciate their attempt at any production. But the success of any endeavor can hardly be determined by the amount of hard work put into it. The engineers at Cape Canaveral certainly put much hard work in the launching of a missile. But if the missile doesn't leave the launching pad, it can hardly be called a success. Such was the play: it also never left the launching pad.

Bill Schmitz, the point in my making such harsh criticism of Time Limit was merely to present my opinion of the production, an opinion which I was asked by the editor to give. I'm sorry if my "pessimistic views have left you with a bad taste in your mouth," but it was most probably due to the bad taste which the play left in my mouth.

And another point, Bill, although the review was "just one person's views," I believe it is you, not I, who "apparently lacks spirit in the activities of his fellow students." Why don't you look around you to acquaint yourself with some of the student leaders, and I suggest that you start with the members of the Student Council. You just might find a familiar name among them.

Sincerely,
Ray Krizmanic

Why Are Pumas Anti-Religious?

Dear Editors,

It seems strange that we, who are supposedly mature, young college students "ready to embark out into the world on our own" should become so alarmed at the introduction of new practices in the liturgy. No, we do not like to be treated as "... nothing more than immature, spoiled and undisciplined kindergarten and grade school children ..." (which, I contend, is not truly a description of the manner in which the new liturgy is being introduced). But, if

by Tom Cusick

The Student Council's new Disciplinary committee, which is described on page one of this issue, marks a real advancement in student-administration relations here at St. Joe's. The only similarity between this new committee and the powers the Council has had in the past is that they can still appeal a ruling by the school disciplinary board as regards actions towards a student. The Council, in obtaining this added power, takes upon itself a great deal of responsibility, as well as placing itself in a very tight position.

One of the hardest things that a person can be made to do is to sit in judgment of a friend. This is precisely what the members of this committee will have to do, however. If this committee is to be successful in its work, equality will have to be a basic consideration in all of its actions. By one imprudent action, the confidence of the student body in this committee could be lost.

The members of this committee will be exposed to a great deal of gossip and loose talk in their lives around the campus. The greatest of care and discretion must be used in the method by which they use any information gained through such gossip and talk. It would be far better for them to let one matter pass without comment or action than to risk the irreplaceable loss of student confidence.

One of the strongest assets of this committee, I believe, should be the publication of its actions. I do not think that the actions of this committee should be kept from the students in any case except for reasons such as injury to an innocent person's reputation. The students must know what, how and why the committee is taking a particular action. Ignorance is a foundation for fear and there should be no reason for the majority of students to fear this committee.

There is a great deal to be said in favor of this revision if this is to be a complete observation. We must compliment the administration. To most of us, this is a very foreign thought, but they have certainly shown that they do have some faith in us and that they feel we are able to manage our own affairs.

In the past, the student prefects have been plagued from time to time with uncooperative men in their halls. By uncooperative, I am not referring to the student who just gets out of line once in awhile. We all transgress that line between right and wrong at some time. The real headache to a prefect is the man who continually is flagrant in his regard for the rules and who always has a retort for anything the prefect says. This sort of man seems incapable of living in any society of more than one himself. If the student prefect was having trouble controlling such a man, his only alternative was to send him to the Dean of Student's office. This is one of the more basic evils that will be eliminated in the future.

Now, the student prefect can refer the matter to the Disciplinary committee and the errant student will be judged, not by a member of the administration, but by his peers, who can then administer whatever discipline, if any, they might deem necessary. I feel this will be beneficial to both the student and the prefect.

This new committee marks a very definite advance for our Council. The success or failure of this program depends on the student body now. If they support and respect the committee, I have no doubts as to the future. If the students don't get behind the idea (and there will be some who are very critical of the whole thing), then we can all expect much more stringent rules to be handed down by the administration. Should the student body fail, we certainly deserve to have a stricter code put into force. We will have proved our capabilities.

BEWARE ALL! Whether a gentleman, a scholar or an ordinary clod, finals will start tomorrow for the majority of us. In most cases, this one test will count from one-third to one-half of the final mark—unless you are fortunate to have it count even more. Nevertheless, our day of reckoning is here. What effect does this have on your study habits during the year? What are your plans to prepare for your finals?

Walter Nedza, sophomore, Chicago, Ill. The only difference between regular exams and final exams is the amount of material to be covered. Consequently, there is no marked effect on my study habits. However, cramming time will take a little longer. I'll just start reading and keep on reading.

Ken Ahler, sophomore, Medaryville, Ind. I never really have time during the year to spend as much time for review as I would like and so the study for finals usually ends up being done in the last few weeks. This semester, I have made a schedule and divided my remaining study hours among the six classes I am taking. I hope this plan will prove a help.

Doyle "Dunk" Hahn, freshman, Griffith, Ind.

Since this one test counts from one-third to one-half of the final mark, it makes me very conscious of the importance of it. During the year, I have tried to master the material from day to day, keeping in mind the fact that it will be subject for examination. For the finals, I plan to review the material that was considered most important by the professor, get a good night's sleep before the day of the examination and say a prayer.

Jon Smith, junior, Marion, Ohio The old saying goes that if you keep up during the year, the finals should give you little trouble. I think everybody makes the resolution at the beginning of the semester to keep up with their work. Whether they do it or not is the big question. What are my plans to prepare for the finals? Naturally the same as everyone else's—CRAM! CRAM! CRAM!

Tom O'Connor, senior, Kankakee, Ill. I concentrate chiefly on taking adequate notes and relying on what I learn from day to day. This goes for all finals whether they count 10% or 100%. My plans in preparing for finals rest in reviewing my notes, important parts of the text and a good night's sleep before each final.

Daniel Zawila, freshman, Chicago, Ill. Final exams seem to me a necessary evil, and so in preparing for them, my first step will be to remove all unnecessary material, namely, two roommates. This job will not be as difficult as I expected, since they too have recently been bitten by the "cramming bug." As for the logical aspect of studying, I will alter my regular schedule only to the degree of more study. This will, of course, include adequate reviewing of all necessary material. However, it seems that unlike many prevalent opinions, I think I will sleep nights and even find time for some type of recreation outside of opening and closing book covers!

Robert Ernstmier, senior, Chicago, Ill. It has always been my philosophy to follow the norm of "first things first." So before I worry about my finals, I'll stick to completing the work that should have been done during the semester. And then, like every other conscientious student, I'll CRAM!

Dr. Tom Dooley Thanks St. Joe

Before Christmas, members of the Young Christian Students association on the St. Joseph's campus asked students in their residence halls to donate money to Medico, Inc., the medical international corporation for which Dr. Thomas A. Dooley has toured the nation. This money was gathered together and sent to the doctor, who is now stationed in Laos, and the following thank you note was recently received from him for the donation of $79.41:

Dear Students:

I have just been informed of your most generous contribution to the sick children around the world that Medico is trying to treat.

We pledge you that we shall, indeed, with your help, give to these people, the "hands and hearts of healing and the lips and tongues that teach."

Thank you too, for your prayers. With all of you rooting, I can't help but come out ahead.

Again, many thanks.

Fr. Maziarz Doubles As Mechanic and Horsetrader

by Jerry Mauch

Academic Dean or mechanic, Fr. Edward A. Maziarz has a thorough knowledge of both fields. His qualities as an academic dean are self-evident in his work here at school, although lately he has been accused of delegating all his work to the two capable females in his outer office.

But let's take a look at his mechanical abilities. Recently, Fr. Maziarz took a journey to the Precious Blood Seminary, Carthage, Ohio, along with a few other staff members of the college. As a means of transportation, they chose the best car the college owned, a tattered-and-torn grey Buick of about 1930 vintage.

Being as though it was one of those rare cold, winter days, the chill winds penetrated the back seat of the Buickmobile, smack dab onto the feet of our academic dean. To fight off the cold, the chilly dean assumed a riding position never before seen in this day of automation. Sitting with feet bent and pulled against his chest, the dean soon gave way and pleaded in a "less than mild" manner to stop and plug up the gap causing the freeze-out.

Being the generous souls that they are, his companions gladly slowed the four-wheeled beast down to a stop. When the car finally came to rest at the side of the road, it began its revolt. Letting out a loud sigh, it suddenly sank to the ground amidst a cloud of white smoke emanating from its innards.

Eager to get on their way again, the group of worried clerics managed to move the heap of metal to the nearest service station where Fr. Maziarz offered his kind assistance in the job of repairing the motor. Out of the generosity of his heart, the academic dean closely watched every action the mechanic took, offering advice where he saw fit.

Where Fr. Maziarz' real mechanical ability comes into play, though, is in his job of selling the battered Buick to an unsuspecting sophomore in Drexel hall. The price, $250.00, without even a three month's guarantee. What a bargain!

College Plans SJ Institute of Sacred Music

Beginning next summer, the St. Joseph's college music department will initiate the St. Joseph's Institute of Liturgical Music, which will be largely modeled after the Corso Ordinario of Gregorian Chant of the Pontifical Institute of Sacred Music in Rome. The opening session of the Institute will be held June 20 to July 30 and will be open to both men and women, religious and lay.

St. Joseph's Institute of Sacred Music will offer a comprehensive program of theory, chant, polyphony, organ and similar studies, leading to the degree of B.A. in liturgical music, or to a certificate in liturgical music. All courses in chant and polyphony will be taught by instructors who have been schooled in the Pontifical Institute of Sacred Music in Rome.

The faculty will include, among others, Fr. Lawrence Heiman, C.P.P.S., head of the St. Joe music department, Fr. Eugene Lindusky, O.S.C., head of the music department of Crosier Seminary in Onamia, Minn., Mr. Noel Goemanne, choir director and organist of St. Rita's church, Detroit, Mich., and Mr. Bernard Qubeck, of the St. Joe music department. Both Fr. Heiman and Fr. Lindusky hold degrees from the Pontifical Institute of Sacred Music.

St. Joe students and others interested in attending the Liturgical Institute may receive further information from the Dean's office or from Fr. Heiman.

Players Inc. Disappoint In 'Macbeth'

by Jim McCullough

The Players Incorporated version of Macbeth, presented in the St. Joseph's auditorium on January 7, was a disappointment to anyone who had seen their excellent Twelfth Night on campus last year. It wasn't a case of one really bad actor or one really bad scene; the production failed as a whole. Lacking was that certain spark which ignites a profound emotional response in an audience, and somehow both the actors and the spectators seemed to be aware of this fact during the performance itself.

Very probably one difficulty was that the audience expected too much after last year's astounding success. Another might have been that the Players group went beyond their depth with a play like Macbeth. Many of the speeches in the play are fairly shopworn and it takes an actor of the first rank to breathe new life into them. At any rate it was interesting to note that the drunken porter scene was another Twelfth Night in miniature. Everyone laughed uproariously. But because of the lack of an unbearably tense build-up before the porter's entrance, De Quincey's tenets and the drama's unity were both thrown out the window.

A superior performance by Lawrence Luckinbill as Macbeth might have saved all, but one just wasn't forthcoming. At times it was very difficult to understand him, especially when he seemed to be translating the glowering passion of Macbeth into histrionic bombast.

Dolores Viola as Lady Macbeth did a fine sleepwalking scene which properly horrified the audience and had them hushed in their seat for the first time that evening. Unfortunately this triumph was vitiated by the fact that she acted a mad scene every time she appeared, and perhaps Shakespeare's own advice to thespians might have helped her: "Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus, but use all gently. For in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness."

In contrast to the above, Nicholas Bedessem did a fine job as Banquo, speaking his lines naturally with a sonorous, deep voice and not straining for effect. As evidence of how a good actor can fit himself to vastly different parts, we remember his superbly funny portrayal of Sir Toby Belch in Twelfth Night.

It is the standard set by the Twelfth Night that the actors failed to regain, although one really can't censure them for not trying. From Players Incorporated, however, a nice try is reprehensible.

"Adverse public opinion is the only way in which hard core pornography and obscenity will be stamped out in the United States," Fr. Harold Gardiner, S. J., literary editor of the Jesuit weekly America, told his audience at the last of this semester's lecture series on January 18.

Speaking on "Censorship—The Catholic Viewpoint," Fr. Gardiner said, "Obscenity will never cease to be written. However, it must be controlled and as long as we are kept aware of the problem we still have much on our side."

He referred to the Supreme Court's definition of obscenity: "The obscene must be judged on the basis of whether or not, by contemporary community standards, the work taken as a whole arouses a purient interest."

Fr. Gardiner attacked wildcat censoring activities by any group, including in this category overzealous Catholics who pervert the purposes of organizations such as the Legion of Decency and the National Office for Decent Literature.

According to Fr. Gardiner, the true purpose of these organizations is not to censor, but to organize public opinion. He placed the blame for false notions concerning their purpose on their lack of good public relations.

Noting the importance of defining terms, Fr. Gardiner said, "Censorship is the activity by which a legitimate authority can effectively prohibit the dissemination of the printed word, the visual arts, etc."

Pointing out the distinction between censorship and criticism, Fr. Gardiner noted, "Criticism isn't censorship, even though the by-products of criticism can be similar to the effects of censorship. These by-products included economic loss for the producer, and the restriction of other's freedom to read or see the censored product."

Fr. Gardiner asserted that the Catholic Church is in favor of censorship for its own members and also in favor of limited civil censorship in the United States. He said, "The purpose, end, and goal of law is not necessarily to expand freedom but to achieve justice."

Noting that justice can be achieved by restrictions or expansion of freedom, Fr. Gardiner said, "We find it difficult to accept restrictions. Restrictive aspects are never good unless they look forward to a greater freedom."

In Fr. Gardiner's opinion every case of obscenity should be settled in court and the primary blame should be placed upon the producer rather than the vendors of obscenity.

The Index, the literary horror of most of our opponents according to Fr. Gardiner, lists approximately 4,000 forbidden works. Of these only 200 would interest a modern American reader. Fr. Gardiner noted that no American novel has ever had the dubious distinction of being placed on the Index. He also pointed to the relative ease with which dispensations can be obtained from the general prohibitive law for valid reasons. "No, curiosity isn't a valid reason."

These are the silver wings of a U. S. Air Force Navigator. As a flying officer on the Aerospace team, he has chosen a career of leadership, a career that has meaning, rewards and executive opportunity.

The Aviation Cadet Program is the gateway to this career. To qualify for this rigorous and professional training, a high school diploma is required; however, two or more years of college are highly desirable. Upon completion of the program the Air Force encourages the new officer to earn his degree so he can better handle the responsibilities of his position. This includes full pay and allowances while taking off-duty courses under the Bootstrap education program. The Air Force will pay a substantial part of all tuition costs. After having attained enough credits so that he can complete course work and residence requirements for a college degree in 6 months or less, he is eligible to apply for temporary duty at the school of his choice.

If you think you have what it takes to earn the silver wings of an Air Force Navigator, see your local Air Force Recruiter. Ask him about Aviation Cadet Navigator training and the benefits which are available to a flying officer in the Air Force. Or fill in and mail this coupon.

There's a place for tomorrow's leaders on the Aerospace Team.

Collegeville Confidential

by Tim J. Sullivan, Jr.

Well, students, here we are at the end of another rather successful semester. Success has reigned rampant in every field of endeavor! In an effort, for example, to endow the campus and students with some "tradition," the administration came out with the story of how St. Joseph's of Indiana came into existence as an institution of higher (?) learning and culture. Now, such a story is essential for the tradition of any school which is trying to rise in the eyes of the world. Tradition is a nebulous thing; at best, and oftentimes can not be actually called lies, but can not be graced with the label of truth either. Many attempts have been made to check the validity of some of these stories, but the efforts of conscientious administrators have obscured the origins of most institutions until NO ONE actually knows how they started.

However, due to the devotion to the truth, perseverance, lack of decorum, manners or morals of the Stuff staff, the story of St. Joseph's has been brought out to face the scrutiny and searching glance of the entire world.

Let's face it, men! That story in the catalogue about how St. Joe got its start as an orphanage and an Indian school is a lot of hogwash. Sit back, and let the staff of Stuff tell you the real story.

It seems, that once upon a time, a large, intelligent, but somewhat lazy horse, was spending his time, just bumming around the state of Indiana. (After all, what else can one do during the winter in Indiana?) He was walking down one of the numerous dirt roads one finds in the northern, southern, western, and eastern sections of the state, when he was espied by the poor, but honest, hard-working son of a poor but honest, hard working farmer. This poor, but honest, hard working son of a poor, but honest, hard working farmer had a passion. He wanted an education. Unfortunately, the lad's father, though honest was poor, and despite the fact that he worked hard on the family turnip farm, he could not afford to send the boy to college. So, the boy spent his time, poring over college catalogues, dreaming of the day when he could afford to "be Collegiate" too.

When he spied the large, intelligent, but lazy horse, a plan began to evolve in his brain which could possibly be the answer to all his dreams. So, he walked up to the horse, and said, "Good Evening, Horse! I can truly say, that I have never in my life seen a more beautiful horse. Why don't you come home with me, and spend the rest of your life in leisure, admired and loved by me and my family?"

The horse, being intelligent as stated before, thought the proposition over for at least two seconds before saying "Why yes, young man, I would like very much to spend the rest of my life in the bosom of your home, admired and loved, and especially fed, by you and your family." (Ed. Note: The Editors of Stuff are well aware of the general public's idea that horses do not talk. However, we suggest that you go to a movie sometime, and just watch how many animals can talk!)

So, the horse went home with the boy. And, after feeding the animal all the family's supply of turnips for the winter, the boy killed the poor horse with one swift blow of a claymoores he happened to have laying around the barn. The poor, but honest, hard-working boy then cut the animal in half, left the front section for his poor, but honest, hard working, parents, and slinging hindquarters upon his back, he set off in search of an education. However, he couldn't be admitted to most of the colleges and universities he attempted because he hadn't had his third polio shot.

One night, after trying to attend Notre Dame, his very last choice, obviously, he was sitting around the tavern, drinking cider and sniffing to himself. All of a sudden, the idea struck him that if he couldn't be admitted to an already established institution of higher learning, he would have to start one of his own! So, he set off in search of a site to start his college, and when he found the area of Indiana which was most desolate, bleak, barren, and 126 miles from anywhere, he sat down and started to make bricks to build his Administration building. In the short space of five years, the poor, but honest hard working farm boy had achieved the distinction of being the first president, dean of men, dean of students, teacher, student, and graduate of St. Joseph's college of Rensselaer, Ind. He began admitting other poor, but honest, hard working farm boys, and St. Joseph's grew to be what it is today.

There is another element to this story. During the five years while he was starting St. Joseph's, the boy, whose name was Abercrombie Pufuffnielutch, lived off the hindquarters of that unfortunate animal he had slain that cold winter night in Indiana. (In fact, there is a rumor about that the beef served in the cafeteria on all occasions is actually part of this original horse. (The validity of this is doubtful.) Now, Abercrombie was very grateful to the animal for the service he had given him. And, in his waning years, decided to do something to demonstrate this gratitude. So, he had his name changed to Horseshindquarters Pufuffnielutch. And, to this day, in memory of that valiant horse, and that courageous farm boy, every St. Joe student adopts the first name of "Horseshindquarters" immediately upon his acceptance to the school.

...No man is poor as long as he can still laugh...

Bears' Coach To Speak At SJ Football Banquet

Chuck Mather, backfield coach of the Chicago Bears and a familiar person on the St. Joseph's campus, will be the featured speaker at the annual St. Joe football banquet on Feb. 3. Mather is the former head football coach at the University of Kansas, and during the off-season he sells insurance for a large Chicago firm.

The football banquet is slated for 6:30 in the college dining hall. The purpose of the annual affair is to recognize the efforts of the freshman and varsity football players through the presentation of awards.

A dinner will be prepared by the cafeteria staff. After the meal, letters, plaques, and sweaters will be given to the ballplayers, managers, and cheerleaders who have merited them. A full list of award winners will be printed in the next issue of Stuff. At the conclusion of the award ceremony, speeches will be given by Mather; faculty members; coaches Iofredo, Dwyer, and Holstein; and by members of the football team.

The Pumas finished the season with a 4-4 record despite a pronounced lack of depth and a rash of crippling injuries. The banquet on Feb. 3 will be the college's way of showing its appreciation to all those connected with the team.

Fr. Frederick Feherenbacher Dead at 64

Fr. Frederick L. Feherenbacher, C.P.P.S., professor of history at St. Joseph's since 1928, died in Jasper County hospital at 12:10 a.m., Dec. 21. He died of a heart complication moments after his arrival at the hospital.

Fr. Feherenbacher's health had not been good for a number of months during which he suffered from a heart disorder. He was confined to his room for 24 hours before being taken to the hospital.

Born in Wendlin, Ill., Dec. 18, 1896, the familiar campus figure was graduated from St. Joseph's in 1922. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1928, the same year he started teaching at the college.

At one time or another, Fr. Feherenbacher has served as vice-president, religious superior of the Brothers, and in other administrative positions. Having been a very capable athlete in his younger years, he was well known for his active interest in the athletic advancement of the college.

He was buried in the Precious Blood cemetery in Carthage, O., following the solemn requiem Mass at St. Charles Seminary.

ICC Picture

Evansville, Butler - - the ICC Favorites; St. Joe's Pumas - - Still in the Running

by Bob Rospenda

After seven weeks of play the ICC picture looks like this:

Among the top ICC contenders, Evansville shapes us as the best bet to grab the championship this year.

Finishing in a second place tie with Indiana State last year, the Aces definitely seem to be the team to beat. They have broken away to an excellent start and are presently heading the ICC with a 4-0 record.

Besides holding down first place in the standings, the young men of coach Arad McCutchan are tops in rebounding, club defense and free throwing, holding down first place in all the departments.

The Aces, always tough, earlier won their own holiday tournament for the fourth straight year, and are presently the defending NCAA small college champs.

Smallwood, Wise Top Aces
Evansville has two top flight men in Ed Smallwood and Dale Wise, both at 6'4". Smallwood, the Aces' All-American candidate, is averaging 24 points per game in ICC play. He is also rated seventh in the conference in rebounding.

Wise, a junior, was averaging 15 points a game, but has come along much stronger lately. Not too much of a threat from the outside, he is excellent under the boards, where he picks up most of his points. His scoring ability is only half the story, as he is presently leading the league in rebounding with a 17.8 per game average.

Evansville proved its ability several weeks ago in a 71-50 thrashing of defending champ Butler, on the Bulldogs' home court. The Aces look hard to catch.

Butler Still Tough

The Butler Bulldogs play a rough schedule every year in non-ICC games, and have already played eight games against Big 10 competition, winning three of these contests. Ken Pennington is the Bulldogs' big man and offers their biggest threat. Although Butler has already lost to Evansville once, the season still has a long way to go, and Butler must still be given a chance to repeat as ICC champs.

St. Joe definitely will be a factor in the race this year. With three losses in ICC play, there is still the dim outside possibility of catching Butler and Evansville. The ICC losses have been by two, five, and eight point margins, so these losses look bigger than they actually were.

The loss of Ron Holstein through a foot injury is a serious one. Ron was really beginning to find the range, as evidenced by his 30 point performance against Bellarmine.

He is also a very fine defensive player and he will definitely be missed for the next few weeks. Phil Bergen, who has been starting for Holstein, is looking better each game and could help fill the gap.

Pumas Top Scorers

Of course, with one Bobby Williams out there, you never can tell what might happen. Williams is averaging 25.7 points a game this season, and an amazing 32 points per game in ICC play. He is, of course, first in scoring in the ICC again this year.

The Pumas are the best offensive club in the conference, holding down a 93 point average. They are all alone in this department with the nearest team being Valpo with an 81 point average. The Pumas are also second in the conference in rebounding, with Al Whitlow second in individual averages.

After the semester break the Pumas have deciding games with Evansville, Ball State, and Valpo. The Evansville game will be the big one, with the Aces seeking revenge for last year's upset.

The Valpo game will in turn see the Pumas looking to avenge the earlier 89-87 heartbreaker at Valpo.

Ball State should prove tough on their home court. The Cardinals showed their punch when they rebounded from a 15 points halftime deficit to tie the game in regulation time. The Pumas eventually won in overtime, but only after receiving quite a scare.

Job Placement Interviews For Semester Announced

Senior job interviews for the second semester have been scheduled and announced by Mr. Richard P. Scharf, the director of the placement bureau.

Mr. Scharf pointed out that all seniors wishing to apply for the federal government's applied management internship program must file applications by Jan. 28 in order to take an exam on Feb. 13. More information and application blanks for this program and any other federal service programs are available in the placement bureau office. Exams will also be given for other programs on April 9 and May 14, by the government examiners.

Interviews for the month of February on the Collegeville campus are as follows:

Feb. 10-11—Sears Roebuck and Company; interviewing for retail merchants, retail accountants and auditors and retail credit administrators.

Feb. 16—The United States Treasury Department; interviewing students for the accounting field.

Feb. 24—College Life Insurance Company; interviewing for insurance salesmen.

Feb. 25—Army Audit; interviewing students for the accounting field.

High Schools Visit St. Joe

As a result of the experimental Appreciation Day recently held by Fr. Richard P. Baird, admissions counsellor, a much larger program is planned for next year.

Five Chicago high schools sent staff members to St. Joe. The purpose of the day was to show the college's appreciation for the cooperation given by the high schools and to present a chance for the high schools and the college to learn and appreciate the problems of each other. Representatives of St. Philip Basilica, Mount Carmel, St. Mel, St. Patrick, and Mendel attended the program.

The Day was so well received that Fr. Baird plans to enlarge the program next year. Two separate Days will be staged. One in the fall will be for the purpose of acquainting high school counsellors with the college; another in the spring will be for discussing college preparation. The fall day will probably be called Transition Day and the spring program will vary from year to year. The latter will be termed Math Articulation Day the year when math is stressed and so forth. Each year a different subject will be considered.

The new public relations club, The Couriers, acted as student hosts for Appreciation Day. They met the visitors and showed them around the campus.

St. Joe To Clash with Rebels; Wabash Here on January 28

Villa Madona's Rebels, with a 7-3 record, meet the Pumas Jan. 28 on the Rebs' home court in Covington, Ky. One of their victories was a 77-73 setback of Niagara, a highly rated Eastern independent. Coach Charley Wolf's leading scorer this year is sophomore Dan Tieman, a 5-11 guard who has a 21.9 average, with a total of 224 points. Tieman was the leading scorer of the Rebels' freshman last year, averaging 14 points per game.

The Rebels seem to have a one man scoring threat for their other high man is Dave Kriege, a 6-2 senior forward who has a 12.8 average. Their leading rebounder Gary Alrichs, a 6-6 junior center averages 11.7 rebounds a game, while having a feeble 6.9 scoring average. Rounding out the squad are Don Albrinck 6-5 junior forward who has an 11.8 average and Ray Albrinck 6-6 senior center who alternates with Alrichs, while averaging 10.7 points per game.

The Wabash Little Giants invade the Puma fieldhouse Tuesday, Feb. 9. The Little Giants have compiled a very formidable 5-1 record thus far, after finishing with a 13-8 record last year. Wabash is in the middle of a rebuilding program, having lost the three front-court men through graduation. These three scored 595 points and gathered in 501 rebounds for the Little Giants last year.

One of Wabash's victories this season was an 84-82 squeaker over St. Joe. Bob Bowerman, Wabash's stellar 5-10 senior guard poured through 33 points in the first encounter with the Pumas. Last year Bowerman ranked eight nationally in the individual small college free-throw shooting percentage, with an .895 average.

Coach Bob Brock's other back-court man is three-letter man Tom Bennet, a 5-10 senior guard who averaged 17.2 points per game last year. Bennet is on the verge of setting a new record for the most points in four seasons as a Little Giant. Starting at forwards for the Little Giants are Don Engler, 6-2 junior, a transfer student from Community Junior College and Richard Cassel, a 6-4 freshman.

Jim Cumming, a 6-4 junior, does most of the rebounding and plays center while averaging 3.9 points per game. The Little Giants lack the over-all team speed and rebounding that they had last year when they hit for a 78 point per game average.

Williams' Grand Playola Pushes for the Records

Bobby Williams, sole owner of the St. Joe fieldhouse court, is about to become the owner of most of the Puma scoring records, that is, the ones he hasn't got already.

On the season, Bobby is averaging 26.3 points a game. If he continues any where near this pace, the fantastic Williams should crack three St. Joe season records.

Don Merki owns the record for total points in one season, 484 in 1954-55. Williams now has canned 315 points in 12 games. With nine games to go, Bobby needs to average 18.8 to grab this record.

He will probably also bust the record for the most field goals scored in one season. He holds the old mark of 167 himself, which he set last year. As of now, he has dropped in 124. That leaves him with only 43 buckets to pick up in the last nine games.

Bobby may also break the St. Joe mark for the best season field goal percentage. Greg Jancich fired away for a .497 percentage in 1955-56 to set the old mark. Williams is currently shooting at an unbelievable .650 clip.

In the ICC, Bobby broke the record for the most points in a single game with 42 against Ball State last Saturday in the Puma fieldhouse. The old mark was 41 set by Bobby Plump of Butler in 1957-58.

He has twice tied the mark for most field goals in one game by sinking 17 against both Indiana State and Ball State, each time on the Puma home court.

Bobby is closing fast on the ICC scoring record. He has 196 points in six games for a bewildering 32.6 average. The record is 282, which means that Bobby has to score only 86 points in six more conference contests.

His 42 points and 17 field goals are also St. Joe records, and both of the previous marks were also set by the amazing Bobby. Against Indiana State on the Puma court this year, Bobby threw in 17 field goals to break his old record of 15 set against Northern Michigan last year, and totaled 40 points for a St. Joe record, which didn't last too long.

In addition to all of these, Bobby has already established one career mark and should easily set two more. He has netted more than 30 points on seven occasions. He has hit or .32, .32, .35, .35, .40, .42, and .32.

Also, speedy little Bobby most likely will wind up his career with the best per game scoring average and the highest point total of any three year man. Don Merki scored 1483 points in four years while Williams hit for 683 in his first two seasons.

Club News

The San Jose Central Railroad club has announced the winners of the models and crafts contest which it sponsored recently on the Collegeville campus. First place awards of $10 each went to Andrew Spoljaric, James Shorty and Frank Jozaites. Second place prizes of $5 each were also awarded to winning entrants in the contest. These entries and all other entries in the contest are on display in the Rec hall hobby shop.

The SJC Railroad club wishes to thank all those who entered their work. Plans are being made to hold another contest during the second semester.

The Don Bosco club heard a talk by Fr. Rudolph Bierberg, C.P.P.S., at its last meeting of the first semester. Fr. Bierberg spoke on the history of Church liturgy, explaining how the Christmas customs which we have today were developed.

Members who attended the meeting felt that they gained a deeper knowledge of their faith and the customs concerning Christmas from this talk. The club would like to thank Fr. Bierberg for his generosity.

The Lake County club is planning a dance for the semester break vacation. It will be held in conjunction with the East Chicago Catholic Young Adults. An Easter dance has also been scheduled for Easter Sunday night and will probably be held at the Musicians' hall, in Hammond, Ind.

According to the president of the club, Marty Rosinski, the Christmas night dance was the biggest success of the year thus far. Approximately 250 people attended this affair.

The Fort Wayne club co-sponsored a New Year's Eve party for all college students of the Fort Wayne area. It was held at the Macedonian hall and the attendance was greater than originally expected.

Plans for the second semester include an active participation in the promotion of St. Joseph's college in the high schools around the city. President Connor Loesch has announced that the first meeting of the second semester will be an important one because of the necessity to set up the activities schedule for the coming semester. All members are urged to attend this meeting.
